Geography
Takes you places and into a career!

Royal Geographical Society
with IBG

Advancing geography and geographical learning

What do you want to be? Enjoy studying Geography? Then why not keep it as an exam option! You are more likely to get good exam results in a subject you find interesting and Geography can literally take you places.

Any aspect of a Geography course could launch you into a career; interested in the environment and ecosystems? You could become a conservation manager or work for the Environment Agency.

While this may be a direct use of your Geographical studies, other employers (e.g. marketing and financial services) will look for the problem solving, analytical and teamworking skills taught through Geography.

So Geography as an exam option can not only take you to many different places around the world, it can also open up far more career opportunities than you could possibly imagine. Study the evidence overleaf!

Find out more by logging onto www.rgs.org/education