

● The Empire of Climate

...

Geography played a leading part in a Radio 4 series at the end of 2010, which investigated how climate shapes various aspects of our lives.

The series was made up of five programmes:

- Cultures of Climate
- The Body of Climatic Opinion
- Climate, Race and Immigration
- Climate, Mind and Brain
- Climate's Moral Economy

They aired daily at 3.45pm on Radio 4, between Monday 29 November 2010 and Friday 3 December 2010 and can now be heard via BBC iPlayer. The episodes were presented by Professor David Livingstone OBE - Professor of Geography & Intellectual History.

He set out to show us that climate is more than just the weather outside our window - it's an empire that has shaped our lives throughout history. David drew upon a number of geographers in the series, including Georgina Endfield and Steve Daniels.
