Going Places with Geography

Studying geography will help you better understand the world’s people, places and environments from the local to the global scales.

The skills and knowledge you gain from this subject, at GCSE, A Level or university, are relevant to almost all jobs and workplaces.

With rising numbers of students studying this subject, and geography graduates experiencing some of the lowest levels of graduate unemployment, there has never been a better time to study geography.