I initially worked as a Volunteering Assistant before progressing to the role of Volunteering Coordinator. Most recently I’ve been promoted to the Student Engagement Manager role.

Was there anything particularly useful that helped you get into this role?

100% volunteering! It helped me to discover my strengths and interests, shaped what I decided to do after university and helped me to secure employment (not just for my first job, but every job I’ve had since! Even for my current role I talked about volunteering in my application and at interview). I’d really encourage students to get involved in volunteering – it’s a great way to learn about yourself and others.

What do you do as part of your role?

My main responsibility is to line manage the Student Engagement team, which has now grown to seven full time staff. This includes helping to coordinate the delivery of our student activities – from societies and student media, to community volunteering, employability and RAG (Raise and Give).

I support the team with the day-to-day operations in their areas of expertise, including organising events and managing projects. I also review our processes to ensure they are compliant with university rules and good governance practices, and monitor and evaluate the impact of our work.

Other than that, it’s mixture of different activities – from meetings with my team and colleagues and seeing students to give advice and guidance, to training students, and planning and delivering events alongside my team.

What do you enjoy most about your job?

The thing I love most about my current role is that it is very enabling of others. A key purpose of my role is to help enhance the student experience. I find it really rewarding to know that I’m doing something that I know has a positive impact because I get to talk to the students about it. It’s important to me that I can make a difference to students’ lives.

What advice would you give to someone wanting to go in to this career?

Get involved in the Students’ Union. We now run a Skills Award for students in leadership positions, where we offer training and support to help you identify and articulate the skills and experiences you’ve gained. If you know other students or staff that are involved, then talk to them. This is another great way to get an insight into what it’s like to work here.

Also… volunteer! I can’t recommend it enough. QMSU Volunteering (www.qmsu.org/volunteering) has all sorts of opportunities – from one off activities to on-going things, to match lots of different interests.

Why did you choose geography? Why should others choose geography?

As well as the valuable networks and experience I got through my dissertation project through studying geography at university, I had the opportunity to take lots of different modules which helped me to work out what I wanted to do. Geography helped me develop lots of transferable skills – including analytical thinking, problem solving and communication - which are essential in my current role and useful in all sorts of jobs.

One of a series of profiles of staff and students from Queen Mary University of London.